

DAWSON CITY'S KLONDIKE SPIRIT

One hundred years ago, paddlewheeler traffic dominated the Yukon River, bringing equipment to miners, precious commodities to residents, mail and newfangled catalogue goods from far away and even visitors yearning for the adventure, beauty and mystery of the far north. Prior to existence of today's roads, these great vessels were the highway of the north, the lifeblood of the Yukon.

Friendly local staff and crew who know Dawson City.
